

Companion Bonuses

Familiars and Psi-Crystals use the base statistics for a creature (becomes a magical beast) or Animated Object (construct) of CR 1 or less but gain a bonus of (Master's Level/2, rounded up) on their Natural Armor and Intelligence (Base of 5) and Improved Fortune (Evasion). As extensions of their masters they use their attribute modifiers with his or her base Skills, Saves, BAB, and Effective Level wherever these exceed their natural values. Familiars use 1/2 of their master's HP, animated objects gain +12 HP, "heal" 2d4 points per day, and have a +4 base in Spot, Listen, Move Silently, and Search. In either case their master may communicate with them, opt to share the effects of spells and powers used on him or her with them, and touching one counts as touching their master - allowing them to both deliver touch-based effects and act as channels for them. All of these effects have a base range of one mile.

Unfortunately, if such a companion is destroyed or dismissed the master must make a DC 15 Fortitude save or lose (200 x Current Level) XP. Success reduces the lost by 50%. In either case the companion cannot be replaced for 3D6 months.

As the master goes up in level, the companion gains some inherent abilities. At L1 the link allows an automatic "Aid Another" action on Spot and Listen checks if the companion would also get a roll in it's current location and allows the companion to augment its master, adding 6 CP worth of abilities appropriate to it - whatever it may be - to him or her. At L3 the link allows location and emotion-sharing. At L5 it allows telepathic speech. At L7 it allows a Familiar to speak with other animals of similar types. Animated Objects gain the ability to speak normally. At L9 Familiars gain the ability to speak normally while Animated Objects gain the ability to fly at 50 (poor). At L11 either gains its master's choice of Spell or Power Resistance. At L13 the link allows sense sharing. At L15 it allows the master to channel spells and powers through the companion. At L17 the link has planetary range and at L19 and up it has transdimensional range.

Mystical Mounts and Companion Creatures use the base statistics for a creature of CR 2 or less (optionally higher, but reduce the Master's effective level for determining their bonuses by 3 per +1 CR, must be at least 1 to have such a companion), but gain Improved Fortune (Evasion) and use their master's base saving throws with their own attribute bonuses. While not as strongly linked to their masters as familiars, they still gain a (Master's Level/2, rounded down) bonus to their Hit Dice (usually d8's), Natural Armor, and Warcraft, a +1 bonus to Str or Con for every 5 levels or part thereof which their master possesses, +3 CP to spend for every level their master has, and an Int of 8. Their master may communicate with them, opt to share the effects of spells and powers used on him or her with them, at ranges of up to one mile. They're usually animals (which become magical beasts), but other creatures are possible.

Animal Companions use the base statistics for a creature of Int of 2 or less and a CR of 1 or less (optionally higher, but reduce the Master's effective level by 3 for determining their bonuses per +1 CR, must be at least 1 to have such a companion) and are only loosely linked with their master. They do gain +2 (d8) Hit Dice, +2 Natural Armor, +2 to Reflex and Fortitude Saves, +2 to Warcraft, a +1 to Str, Dex, and Will saves, and +1 "trick" (as per Handle Animal) for every three levels their master has. Handling or "pushing" an animal companion is a free action and the master gains a +4 bonus on Handle Animal checks or "social" checks involving the companion. Their master opt to share the effects of spells and powers used on him or her with them if they're within five feet. Animal Companions gain 3 CP to spend for every level their master has but are NEVER smarter than Int 2. This can make them rather unreliable at times.

Eclipse and other DHG books:

Using Eclipse with Paths of Power and Legends of High Fantasy is straightforward. While both of these include (entirely different) extensive systems of Metaspells, new Domains, and groups of spells organized into Paths, those function perfectly as a resource for point-based characters. The various Races, Feats (at 6 CP each), and full-scale Ritual Magic systems are also perfectly compatible with Eclipse.

The Practical Enchanter is devoted to Spells and Constructs, creating Magic Items, Spell Research, Spellcraft Effects, and Ritual Magic, all of which are quite compatible with Eclipse. Similarly, the various Feats are compatible (at 6 CP each), as are the Social Magic Items. The Wealth Level Templates, Charms and Talismans, and Great Enchantments also work.

We don't recommend using Talents in a point-buy game. Since they're also a freeform, design-it-to-suit-yourself system, allowing both in the same game is asking for super-specialists and power-gaming. Point buy characters can usually find ways to compensate for a lack of conventional magic items anyway - although the Game Master may want to award bonus Feats and a free level of Self-Development every two levels rather than every three and four respectively. In general, items other than Relics - including Great Enchantments - in such games should be built using the Action Hero (Crafting option) ability rather than with time, XP, and money.

If you want to run a game without using experience points at all, you'll want to consult our OGL web supplement. We can't tell you how to do that in a d20 product.

Feat Conversions

This section converts the d20 3.5 feats into Point-Buy feats. A very few come out more expensive than before, but most stayed the same or fell in price (or rose in capability). A "*" mark means the feats includes the cost of previous feat required under the point-buy system. A character who already possesses the previous feat doesn't have to pay the full cost.

Quick NPC Conversions

Few Game Masters have the time to design each NPC from the ground up - and most generic NPC's will be less specialized than the PC's. Players invariably try to get the most out of every CP. To quickly convert old NPC's, simply give them 6 CP per level to spend on whatever helps them out without worrying about specialization or corruption.

Afterword

We've heard a couple of protests that Eclipse is "unbalanced."

Personally, we wonder how a system in which every character, both PC and NPC, has exactly the same list of powers and options to choose from can ever be unbalanced. You're not even at the mercy of players with many books and the time to go through them.

What such protestors usually seem to mean is that Eclipse makes it easy to build extremely specialized characters. This is true. Of course, for every speciality, there is a weakness - and the monsters and NPC's can specialize as well.

And there are more of them.

The system is the same for everyone, and so is inherently balanced. The game never is. Are some of the players more cunning than others? More used to the Game Master's style? More familiar with the books and creatures? More widely read? Related to, close friends with, or sleeping with the Game Master? Very persuasive? Have a knack for making whatever they want to do sound eminently logical? Have a knack for finding a way to apply small effects to critical points? Is someone simply lucky? Foolish? Not paying attention? Not able to make it until a bit late every other session? Insists on playing character concepts who don't fit in the game? Impatient with research and planning?

Have you ever played chess against a grand master? Chess is about as balanced as a system can get - but somehow that game wasn't balanced at all.

We've had a character with a silver piece and a Major Image spell defeat an entity which was devouring entire universes - and collapse the whole group with laughter at the same time.

We've also had characters destroy themselves and cause major disasters without an enemy in sight because they failed to think things through.

There's only one form of "game balance" that matters: is someone indulging themselves at the expense of everyone else's fun?

Then squash them. That's a big part of the GM's job.

Art Credits

Line-art character portraits used in this product are from the OGL supplements Character Portraits: Fantasy Heroes and Character Portraits: Fantasy Heroines by Mongoose Publishing. Artists whose work appeared in this series include:

Chad Sergesketter, Nathan Webb, David Griffiths, Anne Stokes, Stephen Shepherd, Marcio Fiorito, Steven Cook, Alejandro Villen, Danilo Moretti, Carlos Henry, Patricio Soler, Eric Bergeron, Eric Lofgren, Shane Coppage, Gillian Pearce, Sarwat Chadda, Andrew Jordan, Renato Guedes, Rene Brandt, Brent Chumley, and Fred Rawles. Unfortunately, we can't tell just who did what.

Other art used in this product is from classical artists. Per the U.S. Copyright Office Information Circular, "the U.S. copyright on any work published or copyrighted prior to January 1, 1923, has expired by operation of law, and the work has permanently fallen into the public domain". Modified versions of such works may or may not be subject to copyright depending on the extent of the modification and whether or not it involves "creativity", compilations or collections can be as a whole, but individual reproductions, where the object is to reproduce the original as closely as the technique permits, apparently are not - per BRIDGEMAN ART LIBRARY, LTD. v. COREL CORP., 36 F. Supp. 2d 191 (S.D.N.Y. 1999, Lewis A. Kaplan, United States District Judge). While this case appears definitive and does not seem to have been altered by the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, given that copyright law is quite complex, and our time is limited, we opted to search for scans which are stated onsite to have been publicly released. Many such files are freely available at <http://www.the-athenaeum.org/> - a site well worth a visit and your support.

Personally, I like classical art, and I think that it deserves a bit more exposure anyway. The painters who's art has been used here include:

Frederick Arthur Bridgeman, 1847-1928. An American painter of the Orientalist school who painted most of his more famous works in Paris and Algeria in the 1880's and 1890's.

Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, 1836-1912. Dutch, later became an English citizen. Extremely popular at the time, now relatively little-known. Specialized in painting scenes of the ancient world.

Fredrich Edwin Church, 1826-1900. A U.S. romantic painter, and the most prominent member of the Hudson Valley School. Notable for his allegorical series.

Maxfield Parrish, 1870-1966. An American painter noted for his richly decorative style and for the widespread reproduction of his artwork. While no copyright renewal records were found under his name in the US government renewal archives, our use of his work has been limited to pre-1923 works, just in case.

Ferdinand-Victor-Eugene Delacroix, 1798-1863. A French painter of the Romanticist period who had some influence on the later Impressionist school.

Raphael von Ambros, 1854-1895. A notable orientalist painter.

William Adolphe Bouguereau, 1825-1905. A French painter noted for his tender portrayals of children and domestic scenes.

William Holbrook Beard, 1824-1900. An American painter specializing in animals.

Fredrich Arthur Bridgman, 1847-1928. A US painter and one of the major members of the Orientalist school.

Elihu Vedder, 1836-1923. A US painter of the Symbolist school.

Eclipse

The Codex Persona

- Build exactly the characters you want, exactly the way you want them, with hundreds of new and expanded character abilities, feats, and completely personalized classes!

- A unified set of rules covering everything from post-apocalypse through fantasy, modern, cyberpunk, futuristic, superheroic, and historical settings, all fully compatible and transferable.

- New magic systems: Hexcraft, the Path of the Dragon, Ritual Magic, Rune Magic, Thaumaturgy, Dweomer, Theurgy and Witchcraft, plus corrupted and specialized spellcasting, to accommodate many different campaign worlds and thousands of different types of spellcasters!

- Integrate restraints on special abilities and powers into your campaign setting, not with arbitrary restrictions and a cumbersome array of prestige classes!

- Drastically enhanced Metamagic, Spell Storing, Item creation, plus expanded Turning feats, Bardic abilities, leadership options, martial arts, proficiencies, combat techniques and more!

- Use Disadvantages, Character Motivations, and Ethics to add depth to characters and worlds. Eliminate pointless restrictions on character development! Customize templates to your every whim. Why should every Half-Celestial have the same powers?

- Playable rules for the Divine - from Channeling to Dominion, on to Divine Ascension - and beyond!

- Alternative rules for Epic Spellcasting. Why should the spell list stop at level nine?

- New Abilities for Barbarians, Bards, Clerics, Druids and every other type of character!

- Full back-compatibility, for seamless integration into your existing campaign and use with any other sourcebook!
